50 BIGFOOT SIGHTINGS IN OHIO!

Eyewitness reports prove legendary creatures live all over the country

'What I saw definitely was Bigfoot,' says farmer Ron Brunner

A RASH OF Bigfoot sightings in Ohio is further proof that the legendary creatures are alive and well and living in wilderness areas all over the country.

"I've had physical encounters with them," says renowned researcher Robert W. Morgan, author of The Bigfoot Pocket Manual: All You Ever Wanted to Know About Bigfoot But Didn't Know Who to Ask (Daring Publishing Group).

Morgan vividly recalls his first meeting with Bigfoot 35 years ago while hunting in the state of Washington.

Territorial display

"I came across something in the bushes," he says. "It turned back and looked at me. It looked like a tall, hairy man about 7 feet tall. It had fingers and toes just like us and was blackish-brown with a reddish tint.

"When you see them, they usually break deadwood off the trees and smack it against the trees. This is a territorial display."

Morgan — who also wrote The Ultimate Legend Quest: The Secrets of Bigfoot as Known to the Native American Indian (Daring) — says Bigfoot has been familiar to native American tribes including the Delaware, Senecas and Apaches for many years.

STORY by MANNY SILVER

Some tribes call Bigfoot "Yamprico," meaning lost or wild people.

"The Indian people have known about Bigfoot for quite some period of time," he says.

"They don't make this information available to white people because they saw what we did to the carrier pigeon and buffalo. Some Indians have committed suicide or suffered severe emotional breakdowns over the past 10 years since encountering Bigfoot.

"They consider it bad luck to encounter Bigfoot — to have eye-to-eye contact or to talk about it to a white man."

But Morgan, a former computer specialist for the Federal Aviation Administration who happens to be part Apache, says he's met Bigfoot several times.

Tracked Bigfoot

After his first Bigfoot encounter, he says, he wanted to go back in the woods "to find out what the hell I had seen."

He observed Bigfoot twice again in the Washington wilderness — in 1972 and 1974 — and has since dedicated his life to learning more about the mysterious creatures and saving them from extinction.

Morgan has tracked Bigfoot all over the U.S. and is currently keeping tabs on the shy, hairy beasts living in Ohio — where there have been numerous Bigfoot sightings in a triangular area formed by the cities of Ashtabula, Coshocton, and Marietta.

9-foot-tall creature

He estimates there are 18 Bigfoot living in Ohio — and Buckeye State residents have verified his claims by providing 50 eyewitness reports.

Ron Brunner, a farmer in Alliance, Ohio, says he saw a 9-foot-tall creature in his fields last December.

"My friends tell me I was in the silo drinking too much corn juice," he says. "But I was cold sober and what I saw definitely was Bigfoot."

Barbara Bilinovich of nearby Barberton, Ohio says three "humongous" creatures chased her from the woods one night.

According to Morgan, Bigfoot usually congregate in secluded wooded areas because they are trying to evade human beings. He says they also live in wooded areas of Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho and Montana.

Other experts such as Dr. Grover Krantz of Washington State University estimate there are as many as 2,500 Bigfoot in the United States.

Morgan emphasizes that Bigfoot is not a monster.

"They're prehistoric people who've learned how to evade us," he says.

"They probably stem from paranthropus, a prehistoric beast between man and ape.

Screams recorded

"They walk erect, have buttocks, fingers and a hallux, which is a big toe that is usually reserved for homo sapiens.

"I have recorded their scream exchanges.

"They imitate wildlife and usually make unusual animal calls that are out of place, like nocturnal oriole calls in the daytime."

Morgan has established a toll-free number to report sightings of Bigfoot: 800-445-6321. "We will put the reports in a computer bank," he says. "We are gathering as much information as we can.

"A large percentage of the sightings will be mistakes, others will be frauds.

"I'm looking for the real ones."

SHOCKING NEW EVIDENCE

Bigfoot is for real!

FOREST RANGER'S INCREDIBLE ENCOUNTER

BIGFOOT DOES EXIST — and new evidence proves it scientifically, claims a leading expert.

Anthropologist Grover Krantz of Washington State University makes the startling conclusion from actual footprints made by a Bigfoot.

PAUL FREEMAN'S plaster casts reveal that Bigfoot weighs more than 400 pounds.

The prints were discovered after a U.S. Forest Service ranger stumbled on one of the creatures in a forest area in Washington State's Walla Walla region.

Detailed plaster casts of the animal's massive footprints reveal they were made by a primate that's neither ape nor human.

"These are the best set of prints ever made," says Dr. Krantz.

What makes the evidence so convincing is the discovery of very fine skin patterns, similar to fingerprints, called dermal ridges.

Says Dr. Krantz: "These convince me the tracks come from a higher primate. And it isn't supposed to exist, so we have an interesting problem here!"

Paul Freeman, a 39-year-old Forest Service ranger, encountered the animal on a clear morning in the Umatilla National Forest.

He recalls: "I saw something suddenly step onto the road. It was about 10 feet high and he saw me about the same time I saw him.

"He looked like all the pictures I've seen of prehistoric man. He was real hairy — a reddish-brown hair.

"The hair was so thick you couldn't see through it on his shoulders, arms and legs. But on his face and chest it was thin enough to see his skin, the color of brown leather."

Freeman estimates the creature was approximately 65 yards away.

"Even at that distance I could hear him breathing real heavy, and I could see the muscles in his stomach moving."

Freeman, a wildlife expert, adds: "I was scared and started backing away a few feet. When he saw I wasn't coming any further, he turned and walked off."

The ranger believes the Bigfoot weighed well over 400 pounds — an estimate later confirmed by the depths of its tracks.

Freeman and other rangers returned to the scene with photographic equipment and material to make plaster casts.

Amazingly, they were able to document 21 medium- to full-size footprints — from not just one creature but TWO!

Dr. Krantz confirms that the prints — the largest 14 inches long and 7 inches wide — were unlike human feet because they had no arch.

He says: "It would have had a stride of some 6 to 8 feet compared to 3 feet for an average man."

And the anthropologist adds: "The most remarkable argument for the existence of Bigfoot is the dermal ridges.

"You can't fake evidence like that."

THE CREATURE is neither ape nor human.

Bigfoot in the Northwest

For years now, I have been researching Sasquatch. And I believe it exists today. I have seen a lot of evidence to prove that Bigfoot is in the Pacific Northwest. I have talked to a lot of researchers who, over the years, complied evidence.

Roger Patterson, of Yakima, Wash., took a film of Bigfoot in 1968. So have many others. Are these films legit? How can they prove Bigfoot? There have been many reports of footprints in so many cases. Oregon and Washington seem to be the best regions for Sasquatch activity. Areas such as Mt. St. Helens and Mt. Rainier seem to be good areas. I'm glad, too, that they passed a law about not shooting Bigfoot.

There have been at least 500 sightings and 600 reports of tracks in California and the Pacific Northwest. His height is seven to 10 feet tall, and weight is 600 to 900 pounds. He has brown or black fur or hair, a gorilla-like face and smells like burning rubber.

The footprints range from 16 inches to 21 inches long and six inches to nine inches wide.

I think if Bigfoot ever gets captured, people should study him so that we can find out what kind of animal he really is. So reports of these creatures continue. Maybe someday we will solve the Bigfoot mystery. We will know what other unexplained animals live in our world.

If anybody has any info on Sasquatch, write to me at 15 Benham St., Bristol, Ct., 06010.
